Mostly a learning experience radmuzom lets you create an easy to understand valuation of a company. You can copy/paste a url containing a company name and description of its business (with a logo). Select a business model, and click to estimate valuation. You can estimate the number of users, revenues, costs, or profit, and then a detailed popup will come, outlining the figures. You can then use it yourself or to reference it. I will retain the ownership of the website and it will not have any ads. Are you interested in this idea? I am sure there is something wrong with the company name, or the domain name (betavalue.me) and the logo (====== timgluz Clickable url: [It looks quite interesting, but I think your branding is really bad. What is "value"? I don't even understand what you want your client to think when he sees this logo and the interface. Good luck, but I think the name betavalue.me is in my opinion not very catchy.
